Health department sending testing, vaccination 'strike team' next week

Photos by Rob Burgess / Plain Dealer

A similar testing site was also held at the Wabash Police Department (WPD) headquarters from Oct. 27 to Oct. 31, 2020, and also from Nov. 3 to Nov. 7, 2020.

Drive-thru COVID-19 clinic will be held at WPD headquarters

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

During Monday's Wabash City Council meeting, Mayor Scott Long announced the Indiana State Department of Health (ISDH) would be sending a "strike team" to conduct COVID-19 testing and vaccinations next week.

The news comes after Wabash County moved into the orange, or second-highest, advisory rating for the first time in six months during the most recent ISDH dashboard update last week.

Long said the ISDH, in conjunction with the Wabash County Health Department and the city of Wabash, will be conducting the drive-thru testing and vaccination services from noon to 8 p.m. Monday, Aug. 30 through Wednesday, Sept. 1 at 1340 Manchester Ave.

The single-dose Johnson & Johnson and the two-dose, recently Food and Drug Administration (FDA)-approved BioNTech Pfizer vaccines will be available.

Binax, or rapid, testing

The single-dose Johnson & Johnson and the two-dose, recently Food and Drug Administration (FDA)-approved BioNTech Pfizer vaccines will be available. Binax, or rapid, testing and PCR testing will also be available at the clinic.

Long said the ISDH had asked the city to provide the site for the clinic.

"We volunteered the Wabash Police Department headquarters," said Long.

A similar testing site was held at the same location from Oct. 27, 2020 to Oct. 31, 2020, and also from Nov. 3, 2020 to Nov. 7, 2020. After being open for two weeks, that testing clinic closed up shop, but not before over 1,000 residents were tested. Long said the new clinic would be "similar in nature" to the previous one held at the same site.

Area Five's Senior Open 2021 canceled due to COVID-19 concerns

No new date yet, but tentative plans made for May 2022

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

The resurgence of COVID-19 in both state and nation has caused Area Five Agency on Aging's long-planned Senior Open 2021 to be canceled, said director of programs Steve Gwin, on Tuesday.

Gwin said that the event, previously known as the Senior Games, had "been totally restructured."

Gwin said they attempted to include anyone in the six-county service area — including Cass, Fulton, Howard, Miami, Wabash and Tipton counties — who was over the age of 60 in the newly-formed Senior Open 2021.

"Due to COVID-19 concerns for the volunteers, employees and participants, we had to cancel and no date has been set yet," said Gwin.

Gwin said they were hoping to be able to hold the

City joins Hoosier Homes Program

IHA initiative seeks to help home buyers

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

Due to a resolution passed during Monday's Wabash City Council meeting, local home buyers will have a new financing tool at their disposal.

The resolution enters the city into a cooperative agreement with the Indianapolis Housing Agency (IHA) to participate in the Hoosier Homes Program.

"The city of Wabash seeks to establish a housing program which includes but is not limited to expanding single-family home purchase options within its eligible jurisdiction, to support homeownership and the commitment to cultivating a thriving community," stated the resolution.

The IHA sponsors and administers the Indiana Housing Initiative, also known as the Hoosier Homes Program, to "provide a homeownership program with competitive HUD, Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac eligible mortgage loans and down payment and closing cost assistance towards the purchase of existing and newly constructed homes."

Mayor Scott Long said this financing tool is used in

WHS adds digital threat reporting tool

Gaggle SpeakUp for Safety to provide confidential tip line for students

By ROB BURGESS
Wabash Plain Dealer Editor

A new digital tool will allow Wabash High School (WHS) students a new, confidential way to report safety concerns.

On Wednesday, Aug. 18, WHS and Gaggle SpeakUp for Safety announced a partnership to provide an additional way for students to "easily and confidentially report threats of violence, bullying, peers in crisis and other imminent threats via the SpeakUp for Safety tipline," said assistant principal Jeff Galley.

Galley said trained Gaggle safety representatives evaluate SpeakUp for Safety tips continually and send an email regarding non-life-threatening items to the designated school or district staff members.

"In severe situations, district-appointed contacts are notified immediately," said Galley. "In the most imminent cases, Gaggle will contact law enforcement to intervene if they are unable to notify a district-appointed contact."

Galley said the Gaggle SpeakUp for Safety tipline integrates directly with G

Applications open for Jim Smith Scholarship

The deadline to apply is Tuesday, Aug. 31

STAFF REPORT

Grow Wabash County and the Leadership Development Wabash County (LDWC) committee are accepting applications for the Jim Smith Scholarship, according to Grow Wabash County project manager for marketing and events Chelsea Boulrisse.

The Jim Smith Scholarship, named for the recently retired facilitator of the LDWC program, Jim Smith, will be awarded to one applicant attending the 2021-2022 LDWC cohort to pay for their full program tuition.

“Jim Smith has been an incredible champion for Grow Wabash County, and especially the Leadership Development program,” Keith Gillenwater, President and CEO of Grow Wabash County, said. “So, when Jim retired from his post as the head facilitator of Leadership Development, we wanted to find a way to recognize his service in a way that we knew he would not only appreciate but would continue to open this program up to emerging leaders all over Wabash County.”

The Jim Smith Scholarship application can be completed online at www.growwabashcounty.com/smithscholarship.

The deadline to apply is Tuesday, Aug. 31. After the deadline, the LDWC committee will review all applications and select one winner that will be announced the following week.

To be eligible for this scholarship, the applicant must already be registered for the LDWC 2021-2022 program and must live and/or work in Wabash County. The committee will select the winner based on the individuals’ profession, long-term goals, financial need and the explanation of why this scholarship would be impactful.

The 2021-2022 cohort of Leadership Development Wabash County will meet every third Thursday between October 2021 and May 2022 at various locations around Wabash County.

For more information, visit www.growwabashcounty.com/lead.

From CVS to Chevron, FDA decision triggers vaccine mandates

By PAUL WISEMAN and JOSEPH PISANI
AP Business Writers

From Walt Disney World and Chevron to CVS and a Michigan university, a flurry of private and public employers are requiring workers to get vaccinated against COVID-19 after the federal government gave full approval to the Pfizer shot. And the number is certain to grow much higher.

For the past eight months, coronavirus shots were dispensed in the U.S. under emergency authorization from the Food and Drug Administration. Some workers and unions objected to getting the vaccine – and some employers were reluctant to require it – because it had yet to receive FDA full approval. That happened on Monday.

“The FDA decision takes that off the table,” said Devjani Mishra, a New York-based attorney with the firm Littler Mendelson, which specializes in workplace matters. She and others in the worlds of business, law and health predicted more companies will mandate vaccines for their workforces.

Shortly after the FDA acted, Walt Disney World reached a deal with its unions to require all workers at its theme park in Orlando, Florida, to be vaccinated.

Drugstore chain CVS said employees who have contact with customers will have to be inoculated. Oil giant Chevron Corp. said it will require some of its workers – such as those who travel internationally, live abroad or work on its offshore platforms in the Gulf of Mexico – to get their COVID-19 shots.

“We pushed ‘go’ when the FDA made that decision,” said Ora Hirsch Pescovitz, president of Oakland University in Rochester, Michigan, which announced on Monday that its 800 faculty members, 1,500 staff members and 18,000 students will have to be vaccinated. Before that, only students living on campus had to get the shot.

She said the university could have legally mandated vaccines before the FDA decision but waited for it because Pescovitz, who is a pediatrician, believes the authorization will help persuade those still on the fence.

On Monday, health experts expressed hope that the FDA’s action would boost the U.S. vaccination rate, which bottomed out at about a half-million shots a day in July – down from a peak of 3.4 million a day on average in April.

The number of shots dispensed has since climbed to about 850,000 a day amid growing alarm over the highly contagious delta variant, which has sent deaths, cases and hospitalizations soaring, wiping out months of progress.

Littler Mendelson released a survey Monday showing that 9 percent of employers are already mandating vaccines for at least some of their workers, and an additional 12 percent are planning to impose some sort of mandate in the near future. In January, just 1 percent of firms Littler Mendelson surveyed had issued vaccine requirements.

There is a risk for employers at a time when many are struggling to fill openings and workers are confident of finding better jobs: Faced with a vaccine requirement, an employee might “say, ‘OK, fine. I’m leaving,’” Mishra said. “It’s not a given you’re going to be able to fill that job with someone who is vaccinated.”

lanes will be identified for testing vaccination,” said Long. “We encourage those who wish to be tested and vaccinated to participate in this event.”

Just months ago, the state was in the process of closing many free COVID-19 testing sites around the state. As cases have increased, though, clinics like this newest one have been announced around the state.

The ISDH recently announced they would be closing COVID-19 testing sites run by OptumServe Health Services effective June 30. At its peak, OptumServe provided testing in 53 counties.

With the change, Parkview Wabash Hospital president

Marilyn J. Custer-Mitchell said for free testing, Wabash County residents would have to visit a state-run testing site.

Parkview Health public relations manager Tami Brigle said the COVID-19 diagnostic testing remains available at the Parkview FirstCare Walk-In Clinic in Wabash.

County project manager for marketing and events Chelsea Boulrisse.

“We are honored to be recognizing the impact that MPS Egg Farms has made on the Wabash County community,” Grow Wabash County CEO and president Keith Gillenwater. “MPS Egg Farms and the Krouse and Grant families have been incredible champions of Wabash County. In addition to having great success as one of the top egg farms in the Midwest, MPS has also devoted itself to serving the Wabash County community.”

MPS’s history in Wabash

County dates back to 1875 when the Strauss Family built a water-powered grain mill on the Eel River in North Manchester. In 1968, Don Strauss shifted focus from supplying feed, to production and marketing of eggs on their farms.

Today, MPS Egg Farms produces over 10 million eggs daily with farms in Indiana, Illinois and Texas. These eggs are packaged and sold to retail grocers throughout the United States. In addition to growing as a company, MPS and the Krouse and Grant families have expanded their service to Wabash County by serving on various boards and committees focused on the betterment of our communities and providing donations to local schools and families in need.

“On behalf of the approximately 500 people who work for MPS and make it the exceptional company it is today, I would like to say what an honor it is for all of us to be selected as the 2021 Business of the Year,” said MPS Egg Farms CEO Bob Krouse.

Registration is now open for tickets and sponsorships for the 2021 Annual Dinner Celebration from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 14 in Legacy Hall at the Honeywell Center.

around three dozen states throughout the country. The IHA is the state authority for this funding program.

“This will give an opportunity for new housing for potential 100 percent financing through IHA for people wanting to purchase as a home,” said Long.

Long said the program would not cost the city anything and that a per loan fee will be paid to the city in the amount of .0025 percent of the first mortgage amount of every loan originated through this program. The IHA will receive a fee of $150 for every loan purchased by the servicer.

“This is another financing tool in the toolbox to be able to utilize,” said Long. “I’m not saying a lot of people will use it.”

Long said those eligible would have to make less than 140 percent of the area median income, which would equal out to $89,180. “Nobody above that threshold would be eligible,” said Long.

Long said the IHA works with local lenders and that they “are all aware of this.”

City Attorney Doug Lehman said the IHA was “allowing us to piggyback on their program.”

“We could do this ourselves but then we would end up incurring administrative costs and prepare documents and things like that,” said Lehman.

Lehman said the IHA has made this offer available to other counties, including Allen County.

“They’re already doing this in Marion County and they’ve invited Wabash County to join them,” said Lehman. “The more people they’ve got involved in their program the bigger and better their program can be.”

Long said if they were to do this independently they would have to establish a “Wabash Housing Agency.”

“We don’t have to reinvent the wheel if we partner with them,” said Long.

Long said the fees the city collects would be deposited into an account that would be used for future housing projects.

“While we do have a limited supply of homes currently we are working on four housing projects where we would like to have this tool available if people want to use it,” said Long.

District 3 councilmember Terry Brewer said he was concerned about the program and wanted to make sure there was a way for the city to break the agreement in the future if they so chose.

“I don’t see anything in here that would prevent us from getting out at any particular point in time,” said Lehman. “It is not an agreement by a term. It does not say, ‘The city can not terminate.’ There’s nothing here that ties us into any length of term in any way.”

The resolution then passed, with Brewer and at large council member Bryan Dillon voting against it.

Suite for Education from Google, which students already have access to on a daily basis.

“There’s no need for students to download a mobile app or remember a phone number. The SpeakUp for Safety instantly replies and includes a phone number that students can use for text messages or phone calls,” said Galley. “We are excited to provide our students an additional resource to anonymously report any safety situation, ranging from bullying, threats or weapons to even students in crisis. The fact that it integrates directly into their Google accounts and will automatically show up when they start an email, makes it even better. Between this and the other tools that we have in place, we are continually providing ways that will help keep our students, staff and school safe.”

Last month, Galley also announced WHS would be continuing their partnership with Safe School Helpline, which allows students, parents and the community to report any threats of violence, depression or illegal activity “that could jeopardize the safety of our children, staff or school.”

Galley said if a crime – such as possession of a weapon – would be reported, the WCS superintendent would be notified immediately, day or night, as well as any other necessary school officials or local agencies.

Galley said every call is assigned a case number so the caller can then call back to the Helpline to check the school’s progress on the report or to provide more information.

Galley said posters promoting the Safe School Helpline will be located in each of the corporation’s facilities and specific information is being sent to parents through the mail as well as on various social media sites.

On Thursday, Aug. 19, Galley said the Gaggle SpeakUp for Safety tipline is a separate and free service from the Safe School Helpline “that is part of our regular network monitoring system.”

“What makes it nice is that anytime a student starts to compose an email, their email address will automatically pop up. This makes it easier to be notified of a situation and eliminates the need for a student to go searching for an email address or having to remember a phone number. The service also sends out automatic monthly reminders,” said Galley. “As the school year progresses, we will then be able to utilize the metrics that both systems provide to better make our school safer. Working as an additional option to the Safe School Helpline, we feel Gaggle’s SpeakUp for Safety helps eliminate gaps in our students’, parents’ and community’s ability to report any safety concerns.”

Those who wish to use the Safe School Helpline may call 800-4-1-VOICE ext. 359, or 800-418-6423 ext. 359, or text TIPS to 614-426-0240. Free mobile apps are also available for both Apple and Android phones.

‘Unidentified aerial phenomena’ and debates about a creator

The first episode of the “Ancient Aliens” cable TV series promised to show that the growth of intelligent life on this planet had help that came from the stars.

The Prometheus Entertainment summary in 2010 asked: “If ancient aliens visited Earth, what was their legacy, and did they leave behind clues” that still exist?

The bigger question, nearly 200 episodes later, is whether aliens provided the building blocks of life itself. That’s the kind of subject – both theological and scientific – that surfaces whenever there are debates about whether extraterrestrial life exists.

It’s one thing for a recent U.S. national intelligence report – “Preliminary Assessment: Unidentified Aerial Phenomena” – to discuss incomplete technical data and the possibility of hostile spy drones. It was something else to say that experts had no scientific explanations for 140-plus reported “UAP” episodes.

The summary noted that 18 mysterious objects “appeared to remain stationary in winds aloft, move against the wind, maneuver abruptly or move at considerable speed, without discernable means of propulsion.”

This raised familiar questions for those who have followed decades, even centuries, of debates about these mysteries: Who created these objects? Who created the beings who created them? Should this planet’s religious leaders worry?

“The logic is that many people assume life is special, that human beings are uniquely purposed and created in God’s image and that this life – life made in God’s image – cannot exist anywhere else,” said Stephen C. Meyer, who has a doctorate in the philosophy of science from Cambridge University. He is known for writing controversial books, such as “Signature in the Cell: DNA and the Evidence for Intelligent Design” and the new “Return of the God Hypothesis.”

Many experts seem to think Christianity has explicit doctrines on this matter, he added, but “that’s not a sound judgment, since there’s no explicit Christian teaching on the subject – unless we have now taken C.S. Lewis as canonical.”

Lewis – Oxford don and Christian apologist – did, starting in 1938 with “Out of the Silent Planet,” write a space trilogy focusing on contacts between humans and intelligent beings on other planets. In an essay entitled “Will We Lose God in Outer Space?” he speculated that the distance between Earth and the rest of the universe served as “God’s quarantine precautions.”

Shortly before his death in 1963, Lewis told a journalist: “I look forward with horror to contact with the other inhabited planets, if there are such. We would only transport to them all of our sin and our acquisitiveness and establish a new colonialism. I can’t bear to think of it.”

Pope Francis has brushed away similar questions about extraterrestrials. In 2015, he told the Paris Match news magazine: “I think that we should stick to what the scientists tell us, still aware that the Creator is infinitely greater than our knowledge.”

But discussions of extraterrestrial life raise the same “Creator” questions that cause fierce arguments on Earth.

For example, some scientists have speculated that aliens may be linked to life on Earth. In a 1973 paper entitled “Directed Panspermia,” Francis Crick – co-discoverer of DNA structure – and biochemist Leslie Orgel noted that life may have been “deliberately transmitted ... by intelligent beings on another planet. We conclude that it is possible that life reached the Earth in this way, but that the scientific evidence is inadequate at the present time to say anything about the probability.”

That would raise another ultimate question, according to evolutionist Richard Dawkins of Oxford, a popular evangelist for atheism. During one “intelligent design” debate, he wrote that “even if our species was created by space alien designers, those designers themselves would have to have arisen from simpler antecedents – so they can’t be an ultimate explanation for anything.”

That’s a valid point, said Meyer, reached by telephone. But those committed to belief in a random, unguided process of creation – for the universe and life – would still need to demonstrate how conditions exist for this to have happened on other planets. Meanwhile, “a theistic God could have created life anywhere.”

“Not finding E.T. could be a blow to naturalists more than finding E.T. would be a blow to theists,” Meyer said. Substituting aliens for the work of a Creator God wouldn’t “just kick that can down the road, it would kick it out into space.”

U.S. outbreaks force early reversals on in-person learning

By JEFF AMY

Associated Press

ATLANTA — A few weeks into the new school year, growing numbers of U.S. districts have halted in-person learning or switched to hybrid models because of rapidly mounting coronavirus infections.

More than 80 school districts or charter networks have closed or delayed in-person classes for at least one entire school in more than a dozen states. Others have sent home whole grade levels or asked half their students to stay home on hybrid schedules.

The setbacks in mostly small, rural districts that were among the first to return dampen hopes for a sustained, widespread return to classrooms after two years of schooling disrupted by the pandemic.

In Georgia, where in-person classes are on hold in more than 20 districts that started the school year without mask requirements, some superintendents say the virus appeared to be spreading in schools before they sent students home.

“We just couldn’t manage it with that much staff out, having to cover classes and the spread so rapid,” said Edie Morris, superintendent of the 1,050-student Johnson County district in Georgia. With 40 percent of students in quarantine or isolation, the district shifted last week to online instruction until Sept. 13.

More than 1 of every 100 school-aged children has tested positive for COVID-19 in the past two weeks in Georgia, according to state health data published Friday. Children age 5 to 17 are currently more likely to test positive for COVID-19 than adults.

Around the country, some schools are starting the year later than planned. One district in Western Oregon pushed back the start of classes by a week after several employees were exposed to a positive teacher during training.

Before the latest virus resurgence, hopes were high that schools nationwide could approach normalcy, moving beyond the stops and starts of remote learning that interfered with some parents’ jobs and impaired many students’ academic performance.

Most epidemiologists say they still believe that in-person school can be conducted safely, and that it’s important considering the academic, social and emotional damage to students since the pandemic slammed into American schools in March 2020.

School districts right to revolt

Public school administrators around Florida are defying Gov. Ron DeSantis' threats to cut off funding, mandating masks for kids as they return to school. Conservatives who claim to support local control of education and purport to revere the sanctity of human life should stand with them against a tyrannical state chief executive.

DeSantis' order, couched as protecting parents' rights, in fact constrains the liberty of thousands of moms and dads who seek only to send their kids – about half of whom are too young to be vaccinated – to classrooms with reasonable safeguards against COVID's highly contagious delta variant. In Tampa's Hillsborough County schools, a permissive opt-out policy made masks wholly optional. Little coincidence, just one week into the academic year there, more than 10,000 students and 300 staffers have been quarantined or isolated for contact with COVID-positive people.

Wednesday, as President Biden said his Education Department will stand with the locals, the state's largest district, Dade, bucked DeSantis and required face coverings, joining second-largest Broward and Alachua counties, and Hillsborough smartly tightened its opt-out to medical necessities. Thursday, a judge let pro-mask parents' lawsuit against the DeSantis ban proceed. (Outside Florida, a small Texas district has cleverly broken Gov. Greg Abbott's asinine mandate ban by amending its dress code. If schools can say no to short skirts, they sure as hell can require face coverings in the heat of a pandemic.)

Seven in 10 Americans support school mask mandates, and for good reason: Research proves face coverings are a cheap, easy way to frustrate the spread of the pathogen when unvaccinated people are clustered indoors. That's urgent as kids return to class and reports surface from front-line doctors in Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana and elsewhere that the delta variant is infecting many more kids.

More questions than answers about the post-COVID workplace

My 18-month work-from-home experience has come to a formal end. No one, except maybe my wife, is more excited than I. The experience has caused me to muse upon the leadership and management differences the COVID pandemic yielded, and what the effect on individual business and the workplace might be.

COVID had very different effects on the work performed by each group of workers. In nearly all cases, the lack of physical proximity caused by the pandemic required us to reschedule and reform instruction for executive education or academic classes. We struggled to become acclimated with four or five major conference software offerings, but within a few weeks it turned out to be a fairly straightforward technology fix.

In terms of purely administrative tasks, most of what we did could continue to be managed through digital systems we already had in place. But, like most businesses, we still send and receive mail and sign documents such as checks and performance evaluations. With people working remotely, we had more hardware and software challenges to solve without the direct support of our technology office – a challenge, but ultimately most of us became a bit better at troubleshooting software and hardware problems.

Accounting for people and hardware became a tougher task, but signing checks, approving software purchases, mailing letters or accounting for our equipment isn't our mission. It supports our mission, but it's not why we as an office exist. Indeed, a handful of other offices on campus may do those things to the detriment of productive work, but my office focuses on productivity.

For many operations, particularly many who could work at home, worker productivity isn't easy to measure. Some supervisors focus on measuring inputs, such as hours worked. That is easy to do, but doesn't really tell you much about the quality or usefulness of the work. So, the effect of COVID on direct supervision of those tasks had little effect on our work. I suspect most offices that shifted to remote work were similarly affected.

Another method of supervising work involves measuring outputs, such as the number of words written in a day, or the number of calculations performed in a week. As with measuring inputs to production, this is easy but mostly not informative. In some settings, the output measure for productivity is appropriate. This is one way to measure productivity for businesses that do piece work or for workers who are still learning their craft. COVID still permitted evaluating work like this. We continued to use it on some elementary tasks, such as assigning work that would help teach students. However, the productivity of complex, important work simply cannot be measured this way.

Most workplaces that involve abstract or non-routine tasks must focus on the outcomes of their work. Outcomes may be curing cancer or convincing customers to buy more of a product. For my office it is doing research that effectively informs public policy. All of these can be measured by inputs, such as the use of chemotherapy drugs or advertising campaigns. Additionally, all can be measured by outputs, such as the number of surgeries or from surveys of consumers. COVID affected all of these activities insofar as they interfered with in-person activities. Still, in terms of affecting outcomes, such as cancer survival, client profitability or good policy, the workplace changes caused by the pandemic had little direct influence. There was an indirect effect.

More abstract tasks benefit from direct human interaction and collaboration. The pandemic clearly reduced the quality of human interaction. Some of the impacts are obvious, such as the teaching experience. I spent 40 years assessing comprehension in my classroom by judging the body language and facial expressions of my students. Those are very hard to discern on Zoom, requiring me to add more pauses for student feedback and comments.

The development and quality of abstract tasks are those most affected by remote work. Like most workplaces, there is a fairly detailed technical aspect to our work. Discussing the technical aspects of our jobs, such as explaining the mathematical models we use and working through pitfalls of different approaches, was much weakened by COVID.

This type of human interaction concerning the technical details of a project or workflow is part of every workplace, not just a university research center. This accumulated judgement of co-workers is vital for management success, no matter how humble or routine the operation might be. COVID weakened those interactions across a wide range of businesses.

Still, after almost a year and a half of COVID, one in six workers are still operating remotely, and maybe one in three have some type of remote work capacity in their homes. This large shift to remote work will remain with us well past the foreseeable future.

My first big hunch is that we will rush back into meetings, collaboration sessions, in-person training and other human interactions. I'm eager to speak in person to students and colleagues I've seen only occasionally over the past year and a half. This adjustment will have some productivity consequences that are similar to our rush to our home offices in March 2020.

The world of remote work also caused us to drop a lot of tasks we were doing beforehand. It also caused us to focus more intently on human interaction remotely. I suspect most offices will learn to mix personal and online work more effectively in the years to come. So, COVID might become a gateway for more flexible workplaces that blend combinations of in-person and remote work. These mostly seem like welcomed changes.

The work changes to the pandemic will also continue to favor certain types of workers. Not all jobs can be performed remotely or flexibly. There is an education divide in this work, but it is not as stark as often thought. Physicians need to work mostly in person, whereas there appears growing demand for remote work in customer service and data entry that can absorb workers of nearly all skill levels. As we continue to deal with the pandemic, the future of remote work and its affect on offices and businesses leaves more questions than answers. When it is all said and done, I'm just happy to be leaving the windowless nursery I'm using for a home office.

Let's try justice 'by the point'

Today's column offers a serious exploration of a way to solve the crime problem once and for all. So, if you're reading this in your car, put the phone down so you don't miss the point.

And so you don't get four points. Under a provision of a law that just went into effect this year, those are the demerits against your driver's license for using a cellphone without a hands-free device while driving. Another new provision will add four to eight points for speeding in a school or construction zone.

These provisions are added to the existing system of violations that gives us penalty points for things like failure to use headlights (two), disregarding a stop sign (four) and following too closely (six). If you accumulate points ranging from 20 to 42 within a two-year period, your license can be suspended for periods ranging from a month to a year.

Of course, if the violation is serious enough – driving while intoxicated, for example – the whole point system is superseded, and the state goes immediately for suspension. But the point system for "minor" violations is an invaluable way to keep a watchful eye for accumulated evidence of drivers who may be guilty of road unworthiness.

Some of my fellow libertarians, as expected, are upset at what they see as government intrusion into what should be personal discretion. If we are penalized not for the accidents we cause but for our actions that might theoretically cause an accident, well, that is just state nannyism.

But I applaud the state.

Driving is a privilege, after all, granted to us upon our acknowledgement and acceptance of the rules of the road. If we follow those rules and know most other drivers do as well, we have a reasonable expectation of having mishap-free travels.

And who can honestly say the system doesn't work? Yes, there are many accidents, even some fatalities. But have you ever heard newscasters talk of a deadly epidemic on the roads? Have you ever seen mayors or governors wringing their hands over what do about a sudden traffic fatality crisis?

Traffic regulations, in fact, are exactly the kind of laws libertarians always say they want. The rules don't tell us where we have to go or what kind of vehicle we have to drive. They are minimally intrusive, designed solely for the purpose getting us to our destinations as safely as possible.

Which makes them perfect for use against all crimes, not just those involving safety on the highway.

Think about it.

The crime debate is held hostage today between two extreme camps. On the one side, we have those forever in search of "root causes" and eager to forgive almost anyone for almost anything. On the other, we have tough-on-crime zealots who want to lock up shoplifters and jaywalkers and throw away the key.

What we need is a way to balance those two extremes, find a way to imprison the truly dangerous miscreants but allow those who commit minor offenses to remain free to learn the error of their ways.

Why not a point system?

Everyone gets a "stay out of jail" card, and each offense is assigned a number of points. Things like jaywalking and loitering would get the minimum dings on the card, one point. Public intoxication would be worth two points. Embezzlement would get three points. Burglary would get five points, but home invasion, with the residents still there, would garner seven points.

And so on. Get a certain number of points within a two-year period and you go to jail for the designated amount of time.

For more serious offenses, such as murder and rape, the point system would be superseded, and the criminals would go directly to prison. But not everyone who commits a so-called "crime" is destined to become a career offender. The point system would let us watch for accumulated evidence of habitual wrongdoing tendencies.

Now that I think of it, we might even want to consider a separate point system for the most serious crimes. Not all murders, for example, are equal. Surely there should be fewer points for a gang member killing another gang member than for a kidnapper who kills a hostage. And then there are the special cases where the murder might be heinous but not likely to be repeated, such as killing a spouse in a violent rage.

That's probably a little more controversial, though, so we should try the point system on lesser offenses first, just to get a feel for how it might work.

For those who consider this proposal outlandish, just consider how far down that road we have already gone. Plea bargaining is a kind of point system that trades lesser offenses for bigger criminals. "Victimless crimes" are cited all the time by public safety officials trying to prioritize their efforts. And don't forget all the leaders in some of our major cities who have decided to overlook even arson and looting when committed by groups with favored status.

A word of warning here. If you don't think this column is worthy of serious consideration, give yourself a point. And don't think no one is keeping score.

Turning points abroad and at home

The upcoming Supreme Court case about abortion is about more than a Mississippi law and Roe v. Wade. It’s an opportunity for a nation to look in the mirror. We end the lives of unborn babies in United States. We sever the most precious relationship there is – between a mother and a child – and we call it health care. Long gone are the Bill Clinton days of “safe, legal, and rare.”

It’s a miserable thing our culture does to girls and women – expect them to have abortions when everything isn’t planned and pretty. When we are soon to hit the half-century mark of legal abortion in America, is it any wonder that we would be callous to others? Many argue for abortion because of so many other imperfections and injustices. But we ought to ponder, whatever our beliefs on abortion: Could it be making us more inhumane?

On a recent Saturday, I was part of a group trying to walk to an abortion clinic in Brooklyn to pray outside it. We were blockaded by protesters. After some urging and ample warning, two arrests were made of those protesting our prayer. I won’t even begin to tell you some of the crass, blasphemous things that were said.

To be sure, my experience pales in comparison to people falling from a plane trying to escape the Taliban in Kabul. The situation in Afghanistan has so many layers of awful and evil. But the scenes from Kabul should make us humble. And reconsider the value of human life.

By now, you’ve probably seen footage of Afghan mothers passing their babies to American troops, trying to get them out of Afghanistan. Imagine that: A mother who loves her baby so much that she hopes against hope that whatever is on the other side of the airport fence is better than the hell of life under the Taliban. What will we learn from this, as, please God, we are able to get people who helped us with the best intentions out of Afghanistan? The value of human life? That the health of a society is determined in no small part by how it treats its women and children? The life of a woman in the United States is such a gift in so many regards, compared to other places in the world, as any woman who has encountered the Taliban and other evil regimes will tell you. But, as abortion advocates – and, unfortunately, even some far-right commentators – compare pro-lifers to the Taliban, it is, in fact abortion that is the assault on women and children. That’s not a judgment so much as a plea that whatever we believe about abortion, we consider there might be a better way.

A law student weeps as she walks into an abortion clinic because she believes she will have no career if she has her baby. That’s a lie. And we make women believe that lie. Girls walk into abortion clinics in America every day believing they have no other choice. But the greatest gift in a woman’s life just might be that unborn child her mother is telling her she has to get rid of.

The above are some of the stories I’ve encountered while praying and sidewalk counseling in past months in New York. We don’t see the images on the news, but there are distraught – and numb – women and girls daily at abortion clinics in America. It’s not health care; it’s an oppression. This is much bigger than an upcoming Supreme Court case – this is a matter of conscience. As we are humbled by the images coming out of Afghanistan and reflect on our actions in that country that led to this point, let it be a moment for reflecting on the value of human life and how we can more effectively cherish it.

9 women now serving as governors in U.S., tying a record

By DAVID A. LIEB
Associated Press

With Kathy Hochul officially taking the reins as New York’s governor, a historic number of women are currently leading U.S. states – a push towards equality and representation that could continue into next year’s midterm elections.

There are now nine women serving as governor in the U.S. That ties a record that was set in 2004 and matched in 2007 and 2019, but it’s still well shy of gender proportionality.

Taking over on short notice for a scandal-plagued predecessor in the midst of the coronavirus pandemic, Hochul began her tenure Tuesday with more than enough challenges for a new administration. She also began with an historic opportunity: Hochul is the first woman to hold one of the most prominent governorships in the U.S.

“New York as a whole has been a tough place for women to break into the highest levels, because there is very much a tight set of powerful gatekeepers,” said Debbie Walsh, director of the Center for American Women and Politics at Rutgers University.

“And unfortunately – even in 2021 – women are still seen, in effect, as newcomers,” she said.

A century after women gained the right to vote, 19 states still have never been led by a woman. That includes some of the most populous states, such as California, Florida, Pennsylvania and Illinois. Even if it succeeds, California’s recall election of Gov. Gavin Newsom’s next month doesn’t appear likely to elevate a woman to the state’s top job.

Hochul had served as New York’s lieutenant governor until succeeding fellow Democrat Andrew Cuomo, who resigned after a decade in office. Cuomo had faced a potential impeachment battle after an attorney general’s investigation said he had sexually harassed or inappropriately touched 11 women. Among other things, Cuomo also had faced a legislative investigation into whether he misled the public last year about COVID-19 deaths in nursing homes.

Hochul pledged “a dramatic change in culture” that will include mandatory ethics courses and improved sexual harassment training for state employees.

“I want people to believe in their government again,” Hochul said Tuesday while outlining her top goal.

Hochul already has announced she will seek a full four-year term in 2022.

Taking over in a crisis could benefit her politically, especially since women can face greater scrutiny when running for office, said Betsey Fischer Martin, executive director of the Women & Politics Institute at American University.

“It gives her an automatic way to shine in the office,” Fischer Martin said.

Young woman feels pressure to be ‘perfect’

DEAR ABBY: My name is “Lucia,” I am 15 and I live in Santa Catarina, Brazil. My high school classmates and I saw a letter from “Needs a Direction, Atlanta” on-line. That’s why I’m asking for some advice from you.

Dear Abby

Here in my country, there is a lot of awareness about female power and body positivity, however, we also have a standard of beauty that many girls can’t or don’t want to follow. On social media we see a lot of perfect girls with thousands of followers on Instagram. I don’t let myself be shaken by my appearance or my defects, but sometimes I feel “excluded” because I’m not like the “amazing girl on social media.”

I like the way I look, but I feel out of place in relation to what is expected of teenage beauty. What advice would you give me to avoid feeling inferior to the “amazing girls on social media”? – Coping With Being Me

DEAR COPING: Understand that outward appearance is only one aspect of a person. Looking like they were stamped out of a cookie cutter is a mistake too many girls (and women) make. Please know you are far from the only female who struggles with her self-image. The images and lives displayed on social media are oftentimes not reality.

What you must remember is the importance of being YOUR AUTHENTIC SELF. Be neat, clean and well-groomed in your daily life. Be friendly to others. What are your talents, qualities and goals? Concentrate on developing them because they not only won’t fade with time, they will continue to improve. If you do this, others will find you attractive, and it won’t require cosmetic surgery, regardless of how popular it may be in your country. (And mine.)

DEAR ABBY: A large neighborhood group, social and friendly, has been invaded by someone with wandering hands. I was the recipient of three incidents. I know of other women who have experienced the same, yet they won’t share it with their husbands. My husband saw it happen and was on it. He not only protected me, but made sure the offender knew we would not tolerate it. The result? We are now the outcasts of gatherings!

Everyone is trying to convince us to “make up” and accept the error of the “drunk.” We forgive, yet we have chosen not to be in that group. Our neighbors keep saying we should “forgive and forget” and “get over it” so we can reunite them. It’s not that easy. As much as we initially enjoyed everyone’s company, it’s no longer the same. Please advise. – At A Crossroads In The South

DEAR AT A CROSSROADS: Tell your well-meaning (and forgiving) neighbors you know they mean well, but that when the person put his hands on you, you felt disrespected and threatened. (I assume “the drunk” never offered you an apology.) If you prefer not to be in that person’s company, that is your privilege. Be sure your neighbors know you would be open to socializing with them separately, so they won’t feel you are snubbing them. Then direct your energy toward cultivating a different group with whom you feel more comfortable.

God will abolish evil when Christ returns

From the writings of the Rev. Billy Graham

Q: The more news I watch the more convinced I am that the Bible is right in predicting the conditions of the world when the end times near. Why do so many people blame God for problems the human race creates? – E.T.

Billy Graham
My Answer

A: Jesus spoke of the coming of a godless, secular society, and He spoke of the dangers of heresies of those who try to pervert the message of the truth Christ came to deliver. This is a realistic portrait of our times. We sometimes wonder where God is during the storms of life, in all the troubles of the world. Where is God? Why doesn't He stop the evil?

The Bible assures us that God will abolish evil when Christ returns. No wonder Scripture tells us that, at that time, “every knee should bow... and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord” (Philippians 2:10-11). Jesus did not tell us when He is coming back. He said we were not to speculate. Jesus said that there would be certain signs to watch for. These “signs of the times” are described throughout Scripture, and taken together we see a striking portrait of the end times.

But there is a wonderful assurance in the Person of Jesus Christ. Everyone is faced with the question, “Where will I be when the end of time comes?” As the wonderful song “How Great Thou Art” says, someday He will come with shouts of acclamation, and there will be a joyous reunion of all those who have trusted in Him. We must be prepared for that moment of all moments that count for eternity.

3. This will be considered "bid time" unless subsequently revised by addendum). Bids received after "bid time" will be returned unopened.
4. Bids will be held unopened until the following date and time, at which point they will be opened and publicly read at the location below:
9:30am (local time), Monday, September 20, 2021
Wabash County Council Chambers
1 West Hill Street
Wabash, IN 46992
5. Faxed or e-mailed bids will not be accepted.
6. Bidders are required to enclose with each bid the following bid forms (in duplicate):
a. Bid Document 001300 – State Board of Accounts Form 96, including financial statement
b. Bid Document 003000 – Stipulated Bid Form – Base Bid.
c. Bid Security (see below)
7. Each envelope that bids are included in is required to have a label on the outside indicating project name as well as the contractor's name and address.
F. Miscellaneous Provisions
1. Each proposal shall be accompanied by a certified check or acceptable bidder's bond made payable to the Owner, in a sum of not less than five percent (5%) of the total amount of the highest aggregate proposal, which check or bond will be held by the Owner as evidence that the bidder will, if awarded the contract, enter into the same with the Owner upon notification from him to do so within ten (10) days of said notification. Should a successful bidder withdraw his bid, or fail to execute a satisfactory Contract, the Owner may then declare the bid deposit of bond or check forfeited as liquidated damages but not as a penalty.
2. For contracts over $200,000, approved performance and payment bonds guaranteeing faithful and proper performance of the work and materials, to be executed by an acceptable surety company, will be required of the Contractor at the time he executes his contract. The bond will be in the amount of 100% of the Contract Price and must be in full force and effect throughout the term of the Construction Contract plus a period of twelve (12) months from the date of substantial completion.
3. The Owner reserves the right to reject any proposal, or all proposals, or to accept any proposal or proposals, or to make such combination of proposals as may seem desirable, and to waive any and all informalities in bidding. Any proposal may be withdrawn prior to the above scheduled time for the opening of proposals or authorized postponement thereof. Any proposal received after the time and date specified shall not be considered. The Owner reserves the right to accept or reject any bid or waive any informality or errors in bidding for a period of 90 days after bid date.
4. A conditional or qualified Bid will not be accepted. Award will be made to the low, responsive, responsible bidder.
5. All applicable laws, ordinances, and the rules and regulations of all authorities having jurisdiction over construction of the project shall apply to the project throughout.
6. Proposals shall be properly and completely executed on proposal forms included in the Project Manual. Proposals shall include all information requested by State Board of Accounts Form 96 (Revised 2013) included within the Project Manual. Under Section III of Form 96, the Bidder shall submit a financial statement. The Owner may make such investigations as deemed necessary to determine the ability of the Bidder to perform the work and the Bidder shall furnish to the Owner all such information and data for this purpose as the Owner may request. The Owner reserves the right to reject any bid if the evidence submitted by, or investigation of, such Bidder fails to satisfy the Owner that such Bidder is properly qualified to carry out the obligations of the Agreement and to complete the work contemplated therein.
7. Each Bidder is responsible for inspecting the Project site(s) and for reading and being thoroughly familiar with the Contract Documents and Specifications. The failure or omission of any Bidder to do any of the foregoing shall in no way relieve any Bidder from any obligation with respect to its Bid.

NOTICE OF REAL PROPERTY TAX SALE
Wabash County Indiana
Beginning 10:00 AM Local Time, September 30, 2021
Courthouse - Commissioners' Room 2nd Floor

Wabash County

Pursuant to the laws of the Indiana General Assembly, notice is hereby given that the following described property is listed for sale for delinquent taxes and/or special assessments. The county auditor and county treasurer will apply on or after 09/13/2021 for a court judgment against the tracts or real property for an amount that is not less than the amount set out below and for an order to sell the tracts or real property at public auction to the highest bidder, subject to the right of redemption. Any defense to the application for judgment must be filed with the Wabash County Circuit Court and served on the county auditor and treasurer before 09/13/2021. The court will set a date for a hearing at least seven (7) days before the advertised date of sale and the court will determine any defenses to the application for judgment at the hearing. The county auditor and the county treasurer are entitled to receive all pleadings, motions, petitions, and other filings related to the defense to the application for judgment.

Such sale will be held on 09/30/2021 at the Courthouse - Commissioners' Room 2nd Floor and that sale will continue until all tracts and real property have been offered for sale. At the discretion of local officials, the tax sale may switch to an online format. If those measures are taking place, the public auction will be conducted as an electronic sale under IC 6-1.1-24-2(b)10 at www.zeusauction.com commencing on the same date / time listed above. All location updates will be posted at www.sriservices.com prior to the tax sale.

Property will not be sold for an amount which is less than the sum of:

(A) the delinquent taxes and special assessments on each tract or item of real property; and

(B) the taxes and special assessments on the real property that are due and payable in the year of the sale, whether or not they are delinquent; and

(C) all penalties due on the delinquencies, and

(D) an amount prescribed by the county auditor that equals the sum of:

(1) twenty-five dollars ($25) for postage and publication costs; and

(2) any other costs incurred by the county that are directly attributable to the tax sale; and

(E) any unpaid costs due under IC 6-1.1-24-2(c) from a prior tax sale.

No property listed below shall be sold if, at any time before the sale, the Total Amount for Judgment is paid in full. If the real property is sold in the tax sale, the amount required to redeem such property will be 110% of the minimum bid for which the tract or real property was offered at the time of sale, if redeemed not more than six (6) months after the date of sale, or 115% of the minimum bid for which the tract or real property was offered at the time of sale, if redeemed more than six (6) months after the date of sale, plus the amount by which the purchase price exceeds the minimum bid on the real property plus five percent (5%) per annum interest on the amount by which the purchase price exceeds the minimum bid on the property. All taxes and special assessments upon the property paid by the purchaser subsequent to the sale, plus five percent (5%) per annum interest on those taxes and special assessments, will also be required to be paid to redeem such property.

In addition, IC 6-1.1-25-2 (e) states the total amount required for redemption may include the following costs incurred and paid by the purchaser or the purchaser's assignee or the county before redemption: (1) The attorney's fees and cost of giving notice under IC 6-1.1-25-4.5; (2) The costs of title search or examining and update the abstract of title for the tract or item of real property. The period of redemption shall expire on Friday, September 30, 2022 for certificates sold in the tax sale. For certificates struck to the county, the period of redemption may expire Friday, January 28, 2022.

If the tract or item of real property is sold for an amount more than the minimum bid and the property is not redeemed, the owner of record of the property who is divested of ownership at the time the tax deed is issued may have a right to the tax sale surplus.

The Auditor and Treasurer specifically reserve the right to withhold from the sale any parcel which has been listed in error, or which otherwise becomes ineligible for sale either prior to 09/30/2021 or during the duration of the sale.

This notice of real property tax sale, and the tax sale itself are undertaken and will be conducted pursuant to the requirements of the laws of the State of Indiana which regulate the sale of land for delinquent taxes, pursuant to I.C. 6-1.1-24-1 et seq.

The County does not warrant the accuracy of the street address or common description of the property, and a misstatement in the key number or street address does not invalidate an otherwise valid sale.

Minimum bid amounts are prescribed by law and are subject to change prior to the auction date.

Pursuant to IC 6-1.1-24-3(e), property descriptions may be omitted for properties appearing on the certified list in consecutive years. A complete property list may be obtained at www.sriservices.com or in an alternative form upon request.

Registration For Bidding On the Tax Sale:

If you are interested in bidding on the tax sale for an Indiana county, you may register online at <https://sriservices.com/>. This registration is good for all counties that SRI services. You need to register only once for all counties. Make sure to bring the completed form with you to each sale. This will speed up the registration process for you the morning of the sale. If you do not have access to a computer with internet service you may register the morning of the sale.

Please arrive the morning of the tax sale at least 30 minutes before the beginning time to be assured you will receive your bid number before the start of the sale.

Please bring your registration form and W9 form with you the morning of the tax sale. You will be able to print these forms from the registration web site.

Pursuant to IC 6-1.1-24-5.1 a business entity that seeks to register to bid at the Wabash County Tax Sale must provide a Certificate of Existence or Foreign Registration Statement in accordance with IC 5-23 from the Secretary of State to the Wabash County Treasurer.

Wabash football upended in the season opener

The Apaches will face Alexandria-Monroe HS on Friday, Aug. 27

By CLAY MAXFIELD
Wabash Plain Dealer Freelance Reporter

Wabash's varsity football team opened their season on Friday night against the Lapel Bulldogs in the most unwanted way after a 44-7 defeat. Lapel served as an impromptu rescheduling of opponents for Wabash after the Apaches' original week one foe, the Maconaquah Braves bowed out due to quarantine.

The Apaches looked to keep the contest close when they trailed by seven after one quarter but surrendered 30 unanswered points in the second quarter.

Wabash head coach Adam Handley reflected on the uncertainty of who they would be playing amid week one rescheduling.

"About a week ago we didn't know if we were going to play so it's kind of an adjustment for our kids to realize that we are going to play," Handley said. "I knew they were a good team, I told our guys before the game that they're a good program and they were going to be ready to play football. I think our guys just came out a little flat, first-game jitters. I got a lot of guys on our team that don't have any varsity reps and I think it showed early."

On Lapel's first possession of the game, the Bulldogs ran home a 66-yard rushing touchdown to draw first blood as Wabash squandered their opening drive. The Bulldogs tacked seven more points onto the scoreboard on their next possession with a short run into the end zone.

Lapel did most of their damage throughout the night on the ground, amounting to 279 of their 390 total yards when rushing.

Wabash's only score came midway through the first quarter when Trevor Daughtry returned a punt for 60 yards while Jacob Fuchs had a successful kick for a PAT afterward.

Handley stated that the configuration of their defensive alignment is still a work in progress but was encouraged by what he saw in spurts.

"We're still trying to figure out where we got our best defensive alignment, we've been moving guys around all summer. We saw some things tonight we liked but saw some things we need to move around and change for next week," he said.

Wabash gave up 111 yards through the air to Lapel while the Bulldogs went 3-7 on third and fourth downs combined. The Apaches mustered just 9 first downs all game.

Izaak Wright finished with 50 yards passing while Colten Learned led all rushers with 51 yards on the ground. Freshman Colton Schuler led the defense with four tackles, all of which came in the final drive of the game.

Freshman Colton Schuler led the defense with four tackles, all of which came in the final drive of the game.

The Apaches finished with 132 yards of offense.

"I really wasn't disappointed in our run game," Handley said. "We had a lot of penalties, fumble, interception, those are just drive killers. ... I think there were some bright spots. Games will get better and better with more experience that they get."

With Alexandria-Monroe High School on the horizon, Wabash will be looking to turn the page from their home-opening loss to Friday, Aug. 27 when they host the Tigers. The Tigers come into week two searching for their first win of the season as well after a 37-27 defeat to Alexandria-Monroe's offense was led by junior quarterback Chance Martin and senior running back Max Naselroad, combining for over 250 yards of offense and four TDs.

When poised how he hopes his team will move forward in the upcoming week, Handley noted the importance of continuing to mesh his team on both sides of the ball.

"We just need to continue to work on ourselves," Handley said. "There's a lot of things that are going in our program where guys are trying to find out where their spot is. Just working on ourselves and trying to find the best fit for each individual kid."

Wabash, Northfield CC take titles again

Wabash County Junior High CC Championships was held Aug. 18

By ROY CHURCH

NORTH MANCHESTER — For the second year in a row, the Wabash boys and Northfield girls ran off with the trophies Wednesday, Aug. 18 at the Wabash County Junior High Cross Country Championships at Manchester High School.

In the boys race, both Wabash and Northfield ran without one of their top runners. But Manchester's top performer, Trey Howard, showed up and won for the second straight year.

The outcome was never in question. The eighth-grader led from start to finish and his winning time of 10:53.9 was 42 seconds better than last year.

"Trey has been one of the most dedicated and consistent junior high runners we have had," Manchester coach Jody Sarber said. "His hard work really started to pay off last year, but clearly he is much stronger this year."

But the victory again — for the 11th consecutive year — went to the Apaches, easily, as all seven of its scorers finished in the top 10. Wabash was led by two eighth-graders, Isaiah Cordes in second (11:26.8) and Drew Guenin-Hodson in third (11:52.2).

The top seventh-grader in the 31-man field was Wabash's Ezra Church, who finished fourth in 11:55.4. He was followed by two more eighth-graders, Coleson Kugler, fifth in 12:11.7 and Caidan Burchett, seventh in 12:27.7, to round out the Apaches' scoring at 21 points.

Other Wabash finishers were Camden Oswalt, the top sixth-grader in the field at eighth in 12:32.2, and Treyce Daughtry, the top fifth-grader at 10th in 13:16.8.

Also running for the Apaches, but not counting in the final score, were Raven Weaver, 15th; Luke Kaufman, 19th; Keaton Lane, 24th; Jacoby Amburgey, 26th; Matt Niles, 27th; and Camdyn Hinkle, 31st.

"I think the guys had a great mindset going into the race," Wabash coach Ryan Evans said. "Our experience runners really helped and encouraged our younger and first-year runners. It helps having awesome leaders like Drew, Coleson, Isaiah and Bobby (Shull) who have been running 3-4 years and can offer advice and wisdom."
